BUSINESS 165 Working in Warehouse Environment

Document: This document contains various course descriptions and schedules for academic courses at an institution. It includes tables for regular academic session courses, logistics/transportation/distribution, and Afro-American studies. The document also provides details on biology courses, business courses, and a table of contents for the academic catalog. The courses cover a range of subjects including art, biology, business, and logistics. The document is structured in a clear and organized manner, with each section providing specific information on course requirements, prerequisites, and schedules.

Analysis: The document appears to be a section of an academic catalog, providing students with information on the courses offered, their prerequisites, and schedules. The courses are classified under different departments such as art, biology, business, and logistics. The table of contents helps students quickly find the sections they are interested in. The document is useful for students in planning their academic programs and for faculty in course planning and scheduling.

Knowledge: The courses listed in the catalog cover a wide range of subjects, indicating a diverse academic environment. The inclusion of prerequisites and concurrent enrollment requirements highlights the importance of planning and preparation for students. The document also emphasizes the importance of logistics and transportation, as indicated by the section on logistics/distribution.

Conclusion: Overall, the document serves as a valuable resource for students and faculty alike, providing comprehensive information on the courses offered and their requirements. The organization and clarity of the document make it easy for users to find the information they need.

WHAT IS A LEARNING COMMUNITY?
- Learning Communities are groups of students (25 or less) who share academic interests and goals – students in Learning Communities have at least TWO of the same courses.
- Learning Communities provide a supportive environment for students to encourage academic success.
- Students receive specialized advising and work closely with an academic advisor assigned to their Learning Communities.
- Peer tutors help students learn.
- Students are able to participate in special social events and go on class outings together.

NOTE: Learning Community classes require enrollment in all block classes. Otherwise, you will be automatically dropped.

Some prerequisites to enroll in Learning Community courses require that you are eligible for enrollment in English 101, or have a grade of C or better in English 100, or have consent from the department chairperson.
